hundred feet further up the track was the spot where the woman's body was afterward discovered.

At 6 o'clock yesterday morning it was found. It lay in the centre of the track badly mangled. One leg was cut off and found fifty feet from the body. Only one train had passed over the truck from Long Island City to Manhattan Beach. It passed the spot where the woman's body was found at 9:33 Monday night. It was on that track that the body was found. The woman's hat was found on the cowentcher of Engine No. 4, which pulled the

HOW THE BODY WAS FOUND. The body was discovered by a gang of Italians on their way to work. They in-formed Special Officer Bergmeyer, who iotified the police of the Hamburg Street Station. The body was removed to the attation and was identified a few moments later by the elder Fox. Coroner Nuson was notified and the two men were summoned before him

Where the body was found is diagonally across lots from where the woman and the two men lived. The railrond for a long distance is fenced with wire. To reach the tracks a person must crawl under the wires or jump the fence.

Near where the body was found the fence is torn and sags. On this part of the fence pieces of cloth and a plaid scarf have been found. The cloth matches the dress worn by the woman on Monday night. Near the fence the ground is torn up and looks as if a struggle had taken

August Smith, the flagman at the Central avenue crossing, saw no person pass toward the tracks at that point, and says the woman must have got on the tracks by passing over the fence.

Fox and his son say they left the woman about 9:15 o'clock on Monday night, near the railroad tracks. The elder Fox says he left her first and then the son followed him, trying to induce her to return. Then the two men, so they say, went back to where they left the woman and found that she had disappeared. They say they made search for her in various saloons, but were unable to find her. The saloons are not definitely mentioned. Coroner Nason did not think there was any evidence connecting the men with the woman's death and released them. The police, however, are not satisfied with the examination and are working upon the case. Inspector Mac-Kellar has detailed two of his shrewdest men upon it and will watch developments
